

Lisbon, 1966, architect by the Superior School of Fine Arts in 1989, when she started her career.

Has been teacher of architectural studio since 1989, currently she's invited guest professor in the course of architecture of the Universidade Autónoma de Lisboa. She's regularly invited to lecture in seminars and conferences, in Portugal and abroad.

Started her own office in 2002 as Inês Lobo, Arquitectos.

In the latter years she has stand out as a curator and commissary of architecture exhibitions, being the responsible by the portuguese representation on the 2012's Venice Biennale, the portuguese delegate to the VIII BIAU - Iberian-American Biennial of Architecture and Urbanism.

She is also a regular presence in the juries of international and national architecture prizes, like the FAD prize, 2012 or the Secil prize, 2006.

In 1999 she was awarded the title of Official of the Order of Merit by the portuguese President; in 2013, with the award "Women creators of Culture" by the portuguese government; and, in 2014, the international ArcVision Prize - Women and Architecture.